CURIOSITIES OF MEMORY.

"Memory," says a recent writer on mental physiology, "is the organic registration of the effects of impressions." This definition has at all events the merit of greatly extending the ordinary meaning of the term, and of indicating the relations of the retentive mental faculty in the system of nature. In this view, every organ of plant or animal has a memory. The oak-tree, the wounded limb, the face marked by the virus of small-pox, all have a memory, and one as retentive as that of the brain-cells, in the records of whose marvellous cicatrice modifications we generally, and properly enough, limit the name. The characters in which the changes are written may be said to be indelible. The scar of a deep wound, though it may become less marked with age, is never effaced. Similarly in a brain not disorganized by injury or disease, the records of memory are stereotyped. To recall them to consciousness may be wholly beyond our power; we may think that they are lost to us forever, till something occurs to alter to an inappreciable degree the minute nervelets, and thus to tear off the veil which has fallen from us the thoughts and events of the past.

It is well known that, in the agony of drowning, the veil is sometimes stripped off the tablets of memory, and the impressions again made legible to consciousness. In the following case, narrated by Oliver Wendell Holmes, the revival of the impression led to a very practical result. A negro had been arrested for a severe burglary, and was found in possession of the stolen goods. When it became due, he searched for it, but could not find it. He told the facts to his white friends, having given the bond, and intimated a fraudulent design on the part of the bondsman, who was compelled to submit to the loss and the charge against him. Years afterwards, he was bathing in Charles River, when he was seized with a cramp and nearly drowned. On coming to his senses, he went to his book-case, took out a particular book, and from between its leaves took out the missing bond, in the same condition as when he first put it there. The bond was in the book-case, and had been vividly represented. One's feelings of justice are only partially satisfied by learning that the bond was paid with interest. In a case mentioned by Dr. Abercrombie, it would be difficult to give any feasible explanation of the revival of the impression, unless on the Hermian assumption, that a person may remember what he never knew. A boy, at the age of four, received a fracture of the skull, for which he underwent the operation of trepanning. He was at the time in a state of perfect stupor, and, after recovery, retained no recollection either of the accident or the operation. At the age of fifteen, during the delirium of a fever, he gave his mother a correct description of the operation, and the persons present at it, with their dress and other minute particulars. He had never alluded to it before, and no means were known by which he could have acquired a knowledge of the circumstances.

The foregoing are examples of exaltation of memory under the conditions of injury or disease affecting the organ of thought. But these reproductions of the long vanished forms of the past in recent years have made in perfect health. In many cases, the only thing wanted to revive an impression is some mode of association, either of place or circumstance. The story of young Montague, whom a chimney-sweep had stolen, and whose aristocratic birth was at last discovered by his recognizing his old nursery-room, into which he had descended, is an illustration, true to nature, of the recurrence of former impressions from associations of place. A very striking instance of the revival of an early impression, to all appearances wholly obliterated from the memory, through the person being placed in the situation which originally gave birth to the impression, is mentioned by Dr. Abercrombie. A boy taken to the country in the last stage of an incurable disorder, requested that her youngest child, a girl of about four years of age, might be sent for to visit her, which was accordingly done. The child remained with her mother about three days and then returned to town. She grew up without any trace or recollection of the visit, or of her mother, or of the name of the village in which she had last seen her. After growing up to maturity, she had occasion, along with her husband, who had at one time been her mother in her last illness, to visit the house in which her mother died, without knowing it to be so. On entering the room where her mother had been confined, her eye anxiously traversed the apartment, and she said: "I have been here before; the bed stood from the window in quite familiar to me, and I remember that in this part of the room there was a bed, and a sick lady, who kissed me, and wept." An illustration from the realm of fiction will occur to the reader in the case of Bertram in Guy Mannering. His return to the scene of his childhood awakens a train of reminiscences which conduce to the development of his history and his legitimate claims. But there are other associations equally powerful with those of locality to awaken the long dormant forms of the past. A troop of cavalry which had served on the continent was disbanded in York. Sir Robert Carton turned out the old horses in Knavesmire, to have their run for life. One day, while grazing apart from each other, a storm gathered, and when the thunder peal'd, and the lightning flashed, they were seen to get together in perfect order, as if they had their old masters on their backs. The following case is hardly one of revived memory, but is given simply to illustrate the ludicrous effect of a mal-apropos presentation of an idea which had short before been strongly impressed on a mind perhaps slightly affected with post-prandial exaltation. It is related of Wharton, the Professor of Poetry in Oxford, that after partaking of a Sunday-dinner with a friend, he repaired to his service at church. On his way, he was powerfully saluted with the cry of "Live mackerel!" During the singing of the psalm, he slumbered in the pulpit, and, on the organ ceasing, he arose, half awake, and, instead of commencing the prayer, startled the congregation by giving in a loud voice a part of the crystal ringing in his ears: "Alive, alive, O!"

But the subject of the obliteration of the records of memory under certain conditions, is as curious as that of their unexpected revival. The two kinds of changes are, indeed, in some simultaneous; while one set of impressions is recalled, another is coincidently erased or lost. A well-known living physician not long ago recorded the case of a lady who, up to her sixteenth year, had lived in France, and spoke only French. After this, she came to England, learned the language, married an American, and, twenty and for the next twenty years lived partly in America, and partly in England, speaking English habitually, French scarcely ever. She then became a widow, forgot her English, and, as she married, she, and, I asked who she was, gave her maiden name, and mentioned, in French, the street in Paris in which she had lived as a girl. So completely had she forgotten her English, that it was necessary to change an English for a French maid. In some of the cases of the partial loss of memory from injury or disease of the brain, it would be very puzzling to account satisfactorily for the nature and the very limited extent of the loss. Thus a lover of literature, from the memory of a learned man the letter "W," without apparent by committing any other injury, has wrought the opposite operation of a trepan, and lost all sense of brain-matter, for with it the power to recall the numbers "5" and "7" and was only able to fix them in his mind by anxiously learning them as a child. Sir Benjamin Brodie mentions the case of a groom in the service of George IV. who was kicked by a vicious horse while in the act of mounting it. The groom did not, at first, seem stunned or insensible; but he entirely forgot what he had been doing at the time, the blow was inflicted. There was an interval of time not effaced, as it were, from his recollection. He inferred, in fact, that during that period he had been asleep. A young lady who had been present at a catastrophe in Scotland, in which many persons were killed by the fall of a church, escaped without injury, but with the complete loss of the recollection of any of the circumstances; and this extended not only to the accident, but to everything that had occurred for a certain time before joining in the church. A gentleman mentioned by Dr. Beattie lost his knowledge of Greek from a blow on the head, while his other mental stores were left in act. Sometimes, however, disease appears to make a clean sweep of all acquired knowledge of every kind. The following extraordinary case was published in an American medical work many years ago. The patient was a clergyman, who, at the termination of a severe illness, lost the recollection of everything, even the names of the most common objects. When his health was restored, he began to acquire knowledge just as a child does. After learning the names of objects, he was taught to read, and after this began to learn Latin, language, he had made considerable progress, when, one day, in reading his lesson with his brother, who was his teacher, he suddenly stopped, and, but his hand to his head, being asked why he did so, he replied: "I feel a peculiar sensation in my head; and now it appears to me that I knew all this before." From that time, he rapidly recovered his faculties. It is recorded by Sir Walter Scott, that, when the Bride of Lammermoor in its historic form was submitted to him after an illness, he did not recognize as his own one single incident, character, or conversation it contained, yet the original tradition was perfect in his mind. When Mrs. Arkwright sang some verses of Sir Walter's one evening at Lord Francis Egerton's, the author of them, who seemed to accompany: "Capital words. Whose are they? Pretty, I suppose; but I don't remember them." For a voluminous author to forget some of his own writings does not appear so remarkable; but one can hardly conceive that a person failing to recollect his own name; but cases are on record of this malpractice of forgetfulness. A man of not very strong intellect, who held a civil office the sole duty of which consisted in signing his own name to a number of patents, and one day so much business of this kind to get at, at last he was incapable of recollecting the word he sought to sign. A writer of the last century relates that Mr. Von ——, envoy at St. Petersburg, went one morning to pay a number of visits. Among other houses at which he called there was one at which the servants did not know him, and consequently he was under the necessity of giving in his name; but this he found he had entirely forgotten. Returning round to a gentleman who accompanied him, he said, with much earnestness: "For God's sake, tell me who I am!" His odd request excited laughter, but he insisted, on being answered, asking that he had entirely forgotten his name.

The power of recalling past impressions is perhaps more than any other mental faculty, dependent on the physical condition of the body. Sir Benjamin Brodie, in view of this fact, conceived it possible by a series of accurate observations, to discover the temperament of physical conditions most favorable to memory. Some of the conditions conducive to the exercise of the recollective faculty are obvious enough. Violent action is generally inimical to it. To convince one's self of this, it is only necessary for a person to try to recall a recent impression while running rapidly. Excessive fatigue is equally incompatible with good power of recollection. Sir Henry Holland mentions that at a descent of two hundred and ninety-two fathoms, in the Harz Mountains, remaining some hours underground in each, and at the end was exhausted both from fatigue and hunger, "I then felt," says he, "the utter impossibility of taking longer with the German inspector who accompanied me. Every German word and phrase, deserted my recollection, and it was not till I had taken food and wine, and been some time at rest, that I regained them." But in addition to the physical conditions of the recollective faculty, there are some mental ones of equal importance. Perhaps the foremost of these is indicated in what Sir Philip Warwick says of Lord Strafford: "His memory was great, and he made it greater by confiding in it." There is perhaps nothing which more surely leads to failure of memory than an unreasonable distrust of it. The cloud of success begets mental distraction, and thus determines its loss. Or those in search of association on which recollection depends. Sir Walter Scott had an absolute faith in his power of memory in the morning, when his brain had been refreshed by sleep. He states in his diary that during composition, when he found himself at a loss, he would say: "Never mind; we shall have it at seven o'clock tomorrow morning."

There is a curious illusion or phantasm of memory which most persons experience, some time or other in their lives, the cause of which is not very easily explained. A person goes into a company, and the thought comes over him that the entire surroundings are familiar to him. He has the feeling that the exact situation in which he finds himself existed at some former time. Many have accounted this as an evidence of a former state of existence; and from a recent writer more cautious inferred "that there is more in the memory than we take cognizance of." But it was long ago pointed out by a German philosopher that this feeling of identity with a past scene extends to minute details; and it could hardly be that the same persons could have had an anti-muncrine meeting, say a tea-party, in a drawing-room, in frock-coats, kid gloves, lace dresses, etc. We conclude this somewhat discursive paper by giving an example, from a medical writer, of what may be called perverted memory, as a consequence of insanity, which must have been attended with considerable inconvenience to one of the parties concerned. A gentleman who was in the habit of incorporating quotations "poetic deep," at a certain stage used to lose all recollection of having drunk any liquor himself, but imagined that his family had done so freely. He referred his own sensations to those about him, and on going home, always insisted on undressing, and putting his family to bed, declaring that they were all too drunk to do so themselves.—Chambers' Journal.

Bayard Taylor, who is good authority, says Americans that expect to economize by traveling and living in Europe that they are greatly mistaken. During the last five years the expense of living in Germany and other European countries has largely increased. In all the principal towns of Europe one pays more for the same amount of nourishment and comfort than in the United States. The past Winter in Europe has been a very cold and disagreeable one, and it seems indicated no finger-date into Spring. Even "sunny Italy" is not so sunny as she has been. Give us Colorado a little longer, this being the case.—Pueblo People.

THE SUMNER FAMILY.

There were in all seven children born to Mrs. Sumner, who was a very distinguished looking lady. The family lived on Hancock street, Boston, and there all the children were brought up. Henry, the eldest, was a large, powerful man, died in Orange, N. J., some years since. Charles was next; and his mother was always very proud of him. Having assented now it was he had become the possessor of so many accoutrements, she said that Charles, when a boy, was a very good scholar and diligent in his studies. Albert Sumner was, like his brother, a splendid specimen of manhood. He, with his wife and family, took passage for Europe in the Arctic, and were lost with that unfortunate vessel. In connection with this event, a singular circumstance occured. Albert Sumner's wife was a very rich lady, possessing upwards of a million dollars in her own right; and when she was lost, the Sumner family thought that rightfully they ought to be considered the legal heirs-at-law. Accordingly they contested the inheritance with the lady's relatives; and ultimately won the suit. But the Sumners had only gone to law to vindicate their honor and their rights; they had no intention of impoverishing the dead woman's family; and, having won the cause, they magnanimously resigned all the property to the wife's relatives, thus exhibiting rare disinterestedness. George Sumner came to his death in a very remarkable way. During the war he was going to inspect some troops at a short distance from Boston, when he met with an accident in getting in or out of the railway cars, and hurt one of his knees badly. He was very much in favor of the water-cure, and went to a water-cure establishment to get his knee treated. However, the injury went on from bad to worse, until finally George was so paralyzed all over his body that he could hardly be said that any part of him but his head and his heart was truly alive. Horace, a younger son, was a sickly youth, quite different in appearance from his stalwart brother, the Senator. He was placed for some time with Levi Bartlett, of Warner, N. H., to earn farming. He was of a dreamy, poetic nature, fond of reading and meditation, and very little inclined for any practical business in life. After leaving Warner he went abroad and stopped in Rhine for some time, with Margaret Fuller Ossoli and her husband. The two latter, with their child, were coming to America, and Horace embarked with them. When almost within sight of home the vessel was wrecked off the long island coast, and many on board, including the Ossoli and Horace, were lost. There were three daughters in the Sumner family, of whom only one, who is married to a medical officer in the United States service in California, survives. The rest of the family died when yet young. Charles Sumner's own modest fortune came to him by the successive deaths of his brothers, who left their property to him.—N. Y. Graphic.

HOUSE-CLEANING.

Every woman knows a good deal about house-cleaning, to be sure, but we take the liberty of making a few suggestions about the best way to do it. Near every body does it the way we recommend, so of course it must be right.

In the first place, then—never clean one room at a time. This is too much trouble, and it doesn't seem as if so much is being done. Upset the whole house from attic to cellar. Tear up the carpets—take down the curtains and bedsteads—take stoves, and bring the whole concern out of doors to air! Nothing like thoroughly airing things! If it rains, as most likely it will, and the house should become wet without the stoves, let the family fly round and keep clean! That will warm them if anything will.

Have soap dishes and pieces of sand in every room. Leave some pieces of soap on the stairs. Anybody that falls over them will be a good lesson—it will teach them to look before they leap, next time!

Always begin your house cleaning with nothing cooked in the house. Nothing once in a while is conducive to health, and if any of your family should contract the small-pox directly afterward, the cooking and hot cakes of house cleaning will be found to have been an invaluable preparation of the system for the disease. Allow no previous to small-pox sickness prevails sitting.

Have the dining table covered with books, and vases, and brackets, and bedsteads, easters, and looking-glasses, and pictures, and crockery, and sofas and bows, and pianos and boxes, and lamp shades, and a thousand other trifles which have been thrown out of their legitimate places by the house cleaning, and then you can eat off a four barrel in the pantry. It will save work, and be so cosy.

Scold all you want to. A woman has a carte blanche at such a time to put a lever to her scolding machinery at full speed. No man who has not the heart of a Nero would wish her to hold her peace at this time. Soap suds and scolding invariably go together. Who can tell you why?

When you begin to put things to rights after the scrubbing your patience will be sorely tried. Thomas will have to be invited to help put down the carpets and fix the curtains. The tacks will be crooked, and some boy must go for new ones. There will be rips in the carpet to sew up. There will be signs of moths, and the poker must be heated in to disgust them. Thomas will sneeze, and wish the carpets in—some other place. Then putting down begins. The hammer will come off from the handle, and you will raise a boot-jack sister on your hand trying to fasten it on by the help of a knife and the carving knife sharpener. Thomas will have mud on his boots, and leave the print of his boot on the pale lavender roses in the carpet. Men with muddy boots always step on the lightest spots in a carpet.

The bedsteads will have to be rubbed with washing, and have to be pounced together. Two or three casters will be missing. After you have searched for them a couple of hours, you will find one in the jar of quince preserves and the other down cellar in the coal bin. The third one will not turn up before the next house cleaning revolution takes place.

The cat and dog have fled.

The canary has sought his very highest perch, and sits there shrinking into his yellow feathers, not caring to say—peep! peep! ever so faintly, until this domestic earthquake has rumbled away.

Carpets are down, curtains are up, bedsteads got together, beds are made, and the refreshing smell of soapsuds is everywhere!

Your house is clean. Yes, indeed!

You ache in every nerve and sinew.

You feel as if you had been taken apart by a blacksmith and put together with red-hot clinching nails in all your joints.

Your hands are blistered, your finger nails worn down into the "quick," you have taken cold in your head, and freckled your nose with beating carpets in the sun, but never mind! Your house is cleaned!

And you can Thomas look around and see how nice it looks, and he, in his wretchedness, says he don't see but it looks just as tidy before!

Then you go to bed in a chill, and dream of striped snakes and yellow-backed constrictors, and wake in the morning consciously more dead than alive—but your house is cleaned.—Kate Tiers.

We frequently find teams as heavily loaded when the roads are bad as when they are good, which ruins many good teams. Horses have wonderful memories, and in places where they have once been stuck are very likely to balk again.

The women of Charleston, S. C., have been working for temperance in a very quiet, and as they believe, in a very effective way for over a year past. At the hour of twelve each day, hundreds of them, by concert, offer up prayers in their homes, that barrooms may be closed, and drunkards reformed. And the rum-selling business is really going down.

The late Earl of Carlisle, well remembered by many in New York, when traveling in this country as Lord Morpeth, had great readiness at repartee. Norman Butler understood the value of an aggregation of horses called a "deputation," or "committee," or "caucus." His definition of a deputation was excellent: "A deputation is a noun of multitude that signifies many, but does not signify much."

The King of Persia once ordered his vizier to make out a list of all the lions in his dominions, he did so, and put his Majesty's name at the head of them. The king asked him why, to which he immediately answered: "Because you intrusted a list of rulers to me you don't know to buy horses of you a thousand miles of, and who never come back." "Ay, but suppose they come back?" "Then I'll erase your name and insert theirs."

Dr. Arnold, of Rugby, said: "There are moments that are worth more than years. We cannot help it; there is no proportion between spaces of time in importance, nor in value. A stray unthought of five minutes may contain the event of a life. And this an important moment, disproportionate to other moments, who can tell when it was not so?"

Mme. Mazaine is now installed in the prison of her husband in the Isle of Marguerite. She has been treated with consideration, and the small outgoing assigned her is compatible. But she has no permission to go over the island; and, being subjected to the same régime as the Marshal, she can only take a walk on the terrace of the building. The decision of the prisoner has been with him since the arrival of the latter, while the other son and the daughter came with the mother.

The Reminiscences of Holland House, contains the following anecdote of Voltaire: "When learning the English language which he did not love, finding that the word plague, with six letters, was monosyllabic, and ague, with only the last four letters of plague so syllabic, he expressed a wish that the plague might take one half of the English language, and the ague the other!"

When Napoleon the first was about to invade Russia, a person who had tried to dissuade him from his purpose, finding he could not prevail, quoted to him the proverb, "Man proposes but God disposes," to which he replied, "Dispose as well as propose." A Christian woman on hearing the impious boast, remarked: "Set that down as the turning point of Bonaparte's fortunes: God will not suffer a creature with impunity thus to usurp his prerogative." It happened to Napoleon just as was predicted. His invasion of Russia was the commencement of his downfall.

The Church Journal tells us that Canon Kingsley has a place all his own among the great English preachers. While Macaulay, for instance, is powerful by conscientious thinking out to its end every one of his thoughts, and exhausting it, he suggests nothing. Kingsley, on the other hand, always suggests. He starts forty times of thought in every sermon, which he does not follow out. He flings himself into the medium body and soul. He is full of faults, of course; but he is so big, so genial, so human, such a thoroughly Christian, Englishman, and man, that the reading of his sermons actually makes one feel one knows him, has shaken hands with him, has sat with him, and talked with him face to face."

The Rev. R. Torteous, in a lecture on Amusements, said: "Let men in earnest, men of culture, take no note of the theatre, and, they also make it what it should be, let it be cast aside. The experiment has not been tried, and it must be tried before judgment can be passed. Let us try a small theatre in our own houses. It will keep the boys at home. It will induce the enthusiasm of the girls for the opera and dress. It will unite the father and the mother in the home centre. In many parts of America we are crystallizing home into home, making father a father, and mother a mother, in truth. I suggest to you to try the experiment. If you would have your home made sweeter, it will not be by the length of prayers, but by the application of your household means to the education and amusement of your household people."

Dr. Raise, a German art-critic, has a work entitled "Art in the Home," discusses interior cultivation and decoration. He objects, and naturally, to the usual white-washed ceiling, with the inevitable stucco ornament above the chandelier, and points out that a valuable field here lies for artistic effect. By simply leaving the beams and rafters of the roof exposed and uneven, surface is gained that can be decorated in various styles. This suggestion we should like to see acted upon. Stripes, he asserts, should be unobtrusive pattern, and darker than the walls of the room, and the walls should not be very light, except when a solitary necessary in a dark room, but should form a harmonious setting for the various objects placed upon them.

THE COLORADO SPRINGS GAZETTE

AND EL PASO COUNTY NEWS.

Official Paper of the Town of Colorado Springs.

Official Paper of El Paso County.

APRIL 18, 1874.

THE LOCAL PAPERS—You owe it to yourselves to rally liberally to its support, and exert from as able, high-toned a character as you would do from any education in your midst. It is in no sense beneath notice and care—for it is your representative. Indeed, in its character, it is the summation of the importance, interest and welfare of you all. It is the aggregate of your own consequence, and you cannot ignore it without miserably depreciating yourselves.—New York Times.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

A cross on the wrapper of the GAZETTE signifies that the subscription has expired, and that the paper will be stopped. Those who wish it to be continued are requested to renew their subscriptions as soon as they see the cross.

Juan J. Baca, a prominent sheep-raiser from New Mexico, is in Town.

Mr. Gustave Bartes, of the firm of Bartes Brothers, of Pueblo, was in Town on Wednesday last.

"Whose coal is that we're using?" asked a lady the other day when the snow was two feet deep. "Don't know," said her husband, "and I'm not going to ask."

Some of our respectable citizens, who have been stealing up back stair-cases into secret gambling halls, have now the fear of the Grand Jury before their eyes.

Mr. George A. Bute, Clerk of the District Court, has been spending several days in Town, preparing the Docket for the coming Term.

We presume we have had no prisoners in the Town Calaboose during the last two or three days; otherwise they ought to have been employed to make the street crossings passable for ladies and citizens.

The Good Templars are making preparations for a Mock Trial, which will be enacted next week, and which promises to be very interesting and amusing. The Lodge numbers over seventy members, and is increasing constantly.

Messrs. Burnham & Cutler have just received a large invoice of French plate glass, for the new stores of Mr. Huggins and Messrs. Burr & Lamb, and for Mr. D. Russ Wood's residences.

As a north-country editor who says:—A good church-going friend of ours acts as deacon Sunday morning's and in the afternoon casts up interest on three per cent a month notes.

One of the Omaha papers makes the pertinent remark that Colorado politicians do not appear as anxious now about Colorado's admission into the Union as they were some months ago.

This is a good time for the Street Commissioner to make a tour of inspection. He can now find the holes in places in the sidewalks, and determine which are the crossings that ought to be raised a little. There's nothing like making the most of opportunities.

The poet of the Denver News thus describes the weather in that city: "The snow, the snow, the beautiful snow has fallen and melted away. The mud, the mud, the beautiful mud, has returned again for a stay. But the dust, the romantic dust, will give us a benefit soon, when the whole business world, on a dust, and drive open us all in a gloom."

Since Manufactures are now to be the order of the day, we suggest that a beginning be made with a Tannery. It offers one of the most feasible and most certainly remunerative enterprises of the kind, which can be entered upon. Greeley, we hear, has three Tanneries, and all are doing well. Fort Collins has taken steps for the establishment of one. Colorado Springs should not be behind hand.

Says the Greeley Tribune: "According to the Denver News a new colony is located on the Monument, twenty miles above Colorado Springs, and it already has fifty families. This is a beautiful locality, no mistake about it; but on my mind, the Monument is expected to supply with the water of Colorado Springs, and here is a colony that will want a dozen such streams as the Monument.—What the Greeley Tribune knows, and what it doesn't know, about this matter, might make a column article.

The capacities and business of a town can be told at a glance by the advertising columns of its newspapers. An acute observer says: 'Advertisements contain a world of interest and practical philosophy, because they well illustrate the wants, pursuits and habits of the people.' Any one impatient to know results must advertise. Make up the leading cities of the Eastern cities and note how strong is the faith in the efficacy of advertising: the marvel of a successful newspaper, the Philadelphia Ledger, for example; see its compact columns of closely packed advertisements of such a multitude of wants and superfluities, applications for situations, eligible investments, inventions and inducements, art, science, education, commerce, manufactures, the trades and professions, are all represented. The advertisements of a few days in Sabbath may not be known, but it is not worth knowing. Advertising has become the medium of success, and there are many who could tell the philosophy of advertising and profit by it.

Good weather for duck shot and geese.

Now is the Denver Tribune happy; otherwise "Fair play."

Mr. Wanless has fixed up his Hair in good style for the District Court.

A number of trees have been planted in the College Grounds.

There is talk of a two-hundred-thousand dollar Hotel being built in Colorado Springs the coming summer.

The Rev. F. C. Millington, County School Superintendent, has just paid an official visit to Big Bottom Basin.

The Hon. Charles Adams, accompanied by Mrs. Adams, is up from the Los Pinos Agency.

Lots of our people will put in Fruit and Shade Trees as soon as the snow has gone. It will be just "the nick of time."

There was quite a demand for coal on Wednesday—more demand, in fact, than the neighbors' coal-heaps could well supply.

The men employed on the Denver & Rio Grande Railway have just been paid off. The pay-roll showed a total of about twelve thousand dollars.

Mr. W. F. Petijone, General Superintendent of the Burlington and Cedar Rapids Railway, has been staying, with his wife, at the Colorado Springs Hotel.

General Merritt, late of New York, has purchased the House and Lot on Weber street, formerly belonging to Mr. Sutton. The sale was made through Mr. McIntire, for $1,500.

A gentleman, who is well posted, informs us that in the section of country extending twenty miles south of Colorado Springs, the breadth of land farmed during the coming season will be at least three times as large as that under cultivation last year.

We heard a gentleman lamenting the other day that he sold, a few months ago, a small tract in the northern part of Town, for only a little more than twice what he paid for it. "Now," said he, "it's worth more than twice what I sold it for."

The Colorado Springs Company has just planted two thousand Cottonwoods, in double row, in the middle of Nevada Avenue. When these trees have made a year or two's growth, they will add much to the attractiveness of that fine street.

A gentleman and his family, who left for San Juan last year, returned to Colorado Springs for a visit a few days ago, and said they were sorry that they ever left, business being much better here than they had found it there.

The Colorado Springs Hotel has passed into the hands of Mrs. Karns, who took possession on Thursday last. Mrs. Karns is well known as the able proprietress of the Manitou House, for which she won the reputation of being the best kept hotel in the Territory. She will, without doubt, give a similar reputation to the Colorado Springs Hotel.

Trinidad can beat Colorado Springs. The Enterprize says that, at a mass meeting of the citizens which was held a short time ago, some of the prominent men proposed a resolution "that the laws of the land should be enforced, and that peace, property, person, and life of every individual protected." — Doubtless, they feared that they would be interfering with the "rights of man." They passed any such resolution.

Mr. Lewis Hager, who came here some months ago from Victory, New York, for the benefit of his health, has been so far benefited that he contemplates taking an extended trip through the Territory. San Juan, we believe, will be his first objective point. Mr. Hager has made considerable investments in Real Estate while here.

The officers and teachers of the Methodist Sunday School are making arrangements for a monthly service, to consist largely of singing by the children, together with a general review of the lessons of the month, and other exercises of interest. The first of these School services is to be held on the last Sunday of the present month, and it is intended to make them a permanent feature.

The Greeley Tribune throws a new light upon the Grass question. It says:—It seems now that we really have a period when the grasses die, or becomes poor; though it has been supposed not to be the case. This time is generally in March, or after camp snows have fallen and melted rapidly; by which process the grass is bleached, and it loses its substance. Previous to this, all snows evaporate by the sun's rays, and the grass is uninjured. After the grass loses its strength, cattle can get no good feed till the new grass starts, and this is generally does first on sandy uplands.

On the evening of Easter Monday, a meeting of those attending the services of the Episcopal Church was held in the school-room, Wanless' Block, for the purpose of electing Wardens and Vestrymen for the ensuing year. The Rev. M. F. Sorenson presided. Major Wagner was re-elected Senior Warden, and Dr. Bell Junior Warden, and the following gentlemen were elected Vestrymen—Messrs. Humphrey Zeller, H. A. Wagner, McIntire, Simpson, Pease, and Drs. Bissell and Garcia.—A meeting of the Vestry was held on Wednesday evening last, when it was resolved to take immediate steps for the completion of the Church, and also for the establishment of a Sunday-School. It was stated by the Treasurer that about $2000 would be required to pay off the indebtedness already incurred, and to render the building ready for occupation.

Two more Mutes have been received at the Deaf and Dumb Institution.

The Denver News of Wednesday had an article commendatory of the College enterprize, and said that Colorado Springs, the chosen location, possesses every advantage which could be desired.

The members of the Society of Friends living in Fountain and neighborhood are making preliminary arrangements for the erection of a Meeting House.

We were favored a few days ago with a call from Mr. Chauncey L. Hall. Mr. Hall is again connected with the Denver News, as its traveling correspondent.

It is a good joke,—now that Mr. Matt. France is out of office and Judge McFerran is in—that the Judge proposes to take off the Licence from Saloons and put it on Insurance Agents. One good turn deserves another.

Greeley is shaken from stem to stern by wild rumors of gold and silver mines on the Poudre, richer than imagination, and of easy access. A number of adventurous citizens have gone into the wilderness for to see.

A story with a moral:—The Pueblo Chieftain says: "While most of our business men are complaining of hard times and no trade, Mr. ———, who is a retail liquor-dealer on the Avenue, has as fine business as he can possibly attend to."

The Denver Tribune tells of a gentleman in that city, named Martin Nash, who "now consumes about one hundred pounds of meat and bread per day, for three months." Boarding-house keepers of Colorado Springs, beware of him! If he should ever come into this neighborhood.

The editor of the Golden Globe is no believer in Church Festivals. He says: "Every time we are caught at a festival again, we hope somebody will kick us all the way home and then break our necks after we get there. If there is one form of amusement more insipid than another, it is an average church festival. It does not even please to think to have a female member stand over you while you are eating five-cent ice-cream and two-bits a dish and wonder whether she will have any trouble collecting the money."

The San Juan Prospector says: Our special agent reports and it will be seen from our advertising columns, that among the business men of the principal towns north of here, those of Colorado Springs and Pueblo only manifest a disposition to do well with the San Juan miners in the matter of trade. In both of those places the merchants are supplied with large stocks of goods selected with an especial view to this trade. They rightly think that our prosperity means theirs, and they propose to share it, and the lowest rates and to deal fairly in order to be on good terms with our people. The short-sighted merchants of Denver foolishly think that by keeping and offering no inducements for the trade of this region they can stem the yet tide of emigration towards the San Juan, which is causing them to gnash their teeth in anger.

THE STORM.

This district has been visited during the week by one of the heaviest snow-storms which have occurred within the memory of the oldest inhabitant.

Snow began to fall on Tuesday afternoon, and rapidly and uninterruptedly through Tuesday night and Wednesday, and continued, though in an abated degree, through Wednesday night and Thursday morning. The total fall amounted to 33 inches, being equal to two and three-tenths inches of water.

Contrary to what is usual in the case of snow-storms in this country, very little wind accompanied the storm, hence there was little drifting, but the greatest depth on the level was sufficient to make locomotion thereabouts impossible.

The trains on the Denver & Rio Grande Railway got through to Colorado Springs early on Thursday morning, the snow being soft and not having packed very firmly into the cuts, but the northward bound train remained there overnight, the passengers proceeding by the regular train on Thursday. On Thursday, there was little or no delay.

The Telegraph wires gave way beneath their burden, hence we are not able to give very accurate particulars as to the extent of the storm. It prevailed in Denver and in Pueblo, but the quantity of snow which fell was not so great as here; indeed, the neighborhood of Colorado Springs seems to have received the chief benefit of the storm.

To the cultivators of the soil, the storm has been a decided boon, as it will have put the land into first-class condition for starting seed. To stockmen, too, it will be a benefit in one sense, as it will give a good start to the grass, but in its immediate consequences, there is reason to fear that it has been far from beneficial. It is too early, as yet, to ascertain what losses have been sustained, but several flocks have already been reported.

During Thursday and Friday, a rapid thaw has been going on, and there is the prospect that there will soon be very little snow left.

The storm, as we have said, is one of the heaviest which has occurred within the memory of the oldest inhabitant; but there have been a sufficiency of heavy falls in the past to warrant the expectation that such may come every few years.

Washington, the Elk Chief, says that 400 moons (32 years) ago, when the wild apple, snowed five seasons (days and nights), and the snow was as high as a man's head. A number of the Elks, he says, were frozen to death, through being lost in the snow.

A resident in Southern Colorado told us, some months ago, that he was through this section in 1838, with an expedition bound for Salt Lake, and that the snow fell for seven days in succession in the early part of May, being so deep that they lost a large number of sheep which they were driving with them for provisions, and also several of their mules. While camping in this neighborhood, he said, they saw large numbers of elk, wild horses, and antelope, on the mesa between here and the Garden of the Gods.

On the 22nd of May, 1859, we have inches of snow fell, the storm continuing a night and part of the following day.

On the 30th of April, 1862, there was a very similar storm to that which we have just experienced, continuing a night and a day, and resulting in a total fall of 32 inches. This is the heaviest snow remembered by our old settlers.

In November, 1864, it snowed for a couple of days, and about 18 inches fell.

In the Spring of 1868, there was a heavy snow, of which we have not the exact data, but it was heavy enough to prevent the running of the stages.

TOWN TRUSTEES.

The old Board of Trustees handed over the reins of office to their successors on Saturday evening last, the meeting being held in Mr. Matt. France's office.

The "iron-clad" oath was administered to the new-elected Trustees, by Mr. France, the President of the old Board, and it took hold without flinching.

The new Board then proceeded to organize by the election of a President, Judge McFerran having been voted to the chair as temporary President.

Major McAllister nominated Mr. J. T. Wilson, on the ground that he was the only member of the old Board who had been returned to office, and also that he had received the highest number of votes of any of the candidates.

Mr. Wilson said he could not tell whether he should be able to give that attention to the duties of the office which was called for, and nominated Judge McFerran.

A ballot was then entered into, with the following result: Mr. J. T. Wilson, 3; Judge McFerran, 1; Mr. Sutherland, 1. Mr. Wilson was, therefore, declared the President of the Board.

A committee having been appointed to audit the accounts of the late Town Officers, and various notices of motion having been given, the Board adjourned to Monday evening.

On Monday evening, the Board met in Mr. Sutherland's office, all the members being present.

Judge McFerran introduced motions to repeal Ordinances Nos. 2 and 5, and to substitute others in their stead. The effect of the substitution would be to relieve Merchants and Jobbers from the obligation to take out Licenses, and to impose Licenses, instead, upon Commission Merchants, Brokers, Money Brokers, and Insurance Agents.—The consideration of the motion was laid over to a subsequent meeting.

Judge McFerran also moved to repeal the regulation requiring weekly meetings of the Board, and to replace it by a regulation making the meetings monthly.—Decision on this motion was likewise postponed.

Judge McFerran moved to repeal the Ordinance allowing compensation to the Trustees, and imposing a fine upon them for non-attendance at the meetings of the Board.—The motion was negatived.

The Board then adjourned, until this (Saturday) afternoon.

BOARD OF MANUFACTURES.

After the adjournment of the Board of Trustees, the members, on the motion of Judge McFerran, organized themselves into a Board for the purpose of aiding, assisting, and encouraging manufactures in the Town of Colorado Springs.

Judge McFerran was elected President, and Mr. Thomas H. Parnham Secretary.

Judge McFerran, Major McAllister, Mr. O. H. White, and Dr. Sutherland were appointed a Committee to give special attention to the object contemplated.

On the motion of Major McAllister, it was resolved to call a Mass Meeting of the citizens to take the subject of Manufactures into consideration. The meeting to be held in Wanless' Hall, on Wednesday evening next, at half past seven.

PROBATE COURT.

The Probate Court of El Paso County, has been in session since Monday last, Judge Stone presiding. The following cases have been disposed of:

W. T. Montoe v. Waggoner and Donnelly.—Replevin—Dismissed at Defendant's cost.

C. Bulmer, for the use of E. T. Colton v. John Turner, et al—Suit on bond.—Dismissed at Plaintiff's cost.

THE SUMMER TERM OF COLORADO COLLEGE.

Professor Ayers and Rev. J. M. Sturtevant have issued a fine circular, announcing formally the first Summer Term of the College now established at Colorado Springs.

It is to be open for students of both sexes and for undergraduates from other colleges, as well as preparatory students, in a word, really in session.

The term commences May 6, and will continue ten weeks. Regular tuition, $10, with additional rates for extra branches of culture, like music, painting, etc.

Board in families and otherwise at reasonable rates. The educational work for the Summer is to be under the direction of Professor Jonathan Edwards, of Massachusetts, who will be assisted by experienced teachers.

We are glad to hear of several students from Denver and other parts of Colorado, who propose attending the first term of this important institution.—Denver World.

BUILDING OPERATIONS.

There seems to be more Building going on in the Town than ever before. On one block on Nevada Avenue, above Boulder Street, there are five buildings in course of construction, and on Cascade Avenue, and Weber and Tejon Streets, every few steps brings one to a structure in the builders' hands. All over the Town, indeed, building operations are lively. The following list includes a number of the new buildings which are now under way, or will be so very shortly:

Mrs. Baine is building a Frame Residence on Nevada Avenue. One story, 22 by 29 feet; Kitchen, 12 by 15 feet; Porch in front.

Mr. Giles Cressey is building a one-story Frame Residence on the same Avenue, 18 by 32 feet, containing six rooms. Mr. Whipple is the contractor.—Mr. Cressey is also building a one-story Residence, 15 by 24 feet, containing three rooms, on Tejon Street, southern end of Town.

Mr. Whipple has the residences of Mr. John Wilson and Mr. George Wilson, on Nevada Avenue nearly completed. These are story-and-a-half buildings, 32 by 40 feet, and contain seven rooms each.

Mr. Robbins, a gentleman who has recently arrived from Niagara Falls, is building a one-story residence, 15 by 24 feet, on Cascade Avenue. Mr. Whipple is also the contractor for this building.

Messrs. Russe and Luce, formerly of Wyoming, Pennsylvania, have Mr. Whipple at work on their Art-Gallery on Tejon Street, of which we have made previous mention. The building will be of frame, two stories, 22 by 50 feet, and will contain ten rooms. It is to be built in handsome style.

Mr. William Harpe, who has the contract for the Southern Methodist Church, is pushing work on the frame, and expects to complete the building by the middle of next month.

Captain Clifford's Residence on Nevada Avenue is receiving the finishing touches of the workmen.

Messrs. Weed & Hunt have nearly finished Mr. H. Cummins's House on the corner of Weber and Boulder Streets. It is a handsome residence.

Messrs. Rogers & Strickland have nearly completed Mr. D. Russ Wood's semi-detached Villas on Pike's Peak Avenue, and the plasterers and painters are at work upon them.

The same contractors have Mr. Frank Lombard's residence on Nevada Avenue, almost ready for occupation.

Mr. J. D. Raymond has a large force of men at work on Mr. D. Russ Wood's Villa, corner of Pike's Peak Avenue and Weber Street. It is already sufficiently advanced to show that it will be a very handsome structure.

Mr. J. D. Raymond is also building a story-and-a-half residence, on the corner of Nevada Avenue and Boulder Street, for Mr. William Lowenstein.

Mr. Simpson has a two-story residence making good progress on Kiowa Street.

Mr. J. C. Wilson is enlarging his property on the corner of Nevada Avenue and Kiowa Street, and is about to remove into it, his present residence, on Cascade Avenue, having been purchased by Judge Rankin, who proposes to make considerable improvements in it.

The numerous improvements which are in progress in the Business part of the Town have been already noted in our columns.

During the past week, True & Stetson have shipped about 50,000 pounds of freight to Saguache, and will ship 150,000 pounds to the Los Pinos Agency next week. We are informed that the road from Pueblo to De Norte has been blocked with snow, and that no freight has passed that way recently, whereas the road from here via Poncha Pass has been open all the time.

BUSINESS MATTERS.

A new Barber's Shop on Tejon Street, next door to Becker's Harness Shop.

Messrs. J. M. Freeman & Co. have started a Market Wagon, for the delivery of Meat, Vegetables, etc., to their patrons. A step in the right direction.

The Pioneer Manufacturing Company, owing to the increase of their business, are about to replace their present engine with one of much larger power.

Messrs. Dunbar & Chase expect to be in their office on Tejon Street, in a very few days. They will transact a general Real Estate and Insurance Business.

Messrs. Dickerson & Co. have succeeded in establishing a good trade in the Bakery and Confectionery Line. They do their own manufacturing, and take care to keep up the quality of their wares.

Messrs. Green & White are throwing a good deal of activity and enterprize into their Business. They are handling a large amount of Country Produce, and are thus doing good service both to Ranchmen and to Townsfolk.

Mr. Granger, who has recently come over from Colorado City, where he has been engaged in the Meat Business, is about to engage in the same business here.

Mr. Goodelow has leased the La Fonda House, and is furnishing the rooms on the upper floor for rentals. The lower floor he proposes to devote to business purposes.

Mr. Perkins, of Pueblo, called upon us a few days ago. He was on the look-out for a business location, as he thinks of opening a Branch House here.

The advertisement of Messrs. Crawford and Cone and, Dealers in Grain, Flour, Feed, &c., will be found in another column. Their establishment is on Huerfano Street, opposite Peck & Moore's. We take pleasure in commending them to our readers.

A mineral museum has been opened on Huerfano Street, near to Maxwell's Second-hand store. Mr. J. Peck is the proprietor. His stock includes a number of very choice specimens.

The Millinery establishments have been preparing for the Spring Trade by the purchase of a large lot of Novelties, which have just come to hand. Some of these, by the way, are very tasteful and attractive, and demand the immediate attention of our lady readers. Mesdames Dick & Painter and Mrs. Thornburgh will, doubtless, be very happy to submit them for inspection.

Times are lively with our Builders, as is evident from the list, which we give elsewhere, of buildings which are in course of construction. We understand that Mr. Whipple has twenty-two carpenters in constant work, and our other Builders have their hands thereabouts full.

Mr. George Hamilton's Tailor shop has been moved on to the rear end of the Gazette Office lot, to make way for the large Brick Block at the rear of the City Drug Store. Mr. Hamilton hopes to remove, before many weeks are over, into his new Brick building which is going up opposite the La Fonda House.

A Wholesale Grocery Business is to be put into Messrs. Leonard's old store on Huerfano Street, by Mr. Craig, late of Topeka, Kansas. This stock of goods is beginning to arrive, and, as soon as the carpenters complete the preparation of the store, he will open up business. Mr. Craig has been a resident in Kansas for many years, and has the reputation of being a first-class business man.

Mr. F. E. Huggins is purchasing a large quantity of goods wherewith to stock his new Building, so soon as it shall be ready for occupation. On Wednesday last, he received a large assortment of Jewelry, made up of Colorado precious stones and metals. He has also received during the week an additional stock of Silver-ware.

The Bath-rooms of Millen & Chinn, on Tejon Street, are now open to the public. The Boiler, Tanks, Pipes, etc., have been supplied and fitted by Wilson & Wood, and are a favorable evidence of the capabilities of their establishment.

There was a contest between the Union and Confederate lines at a certain point before Petersburg, during Grant's autumn campaign—a truce to the Cemetery fight. The opposing armies of the two great confronting armies would, dispute of all, occasionally creep into that field for a friendly chat, or for a barter or for a game of cards. Two of them were playing a game one day, with Abe Lincoln and Jeff. Davis as imaginary stakes. The Lincoln side lost. "We now" says the winner, "owe Abe one to me." "Yes, and I'll send him over by the Petersburg Express," responded the defeated Yank. At another time there had been lively firing and some musketry firing during the forenoon—of course but little taking. After dinner there was a slack of hostilities. A Johnny rose up on the parapet of his line, and shook a paper as a sign of truce, then sprang over into the trench. At once a hundred men from either line were over their works, and trade by slice swapping papers for papers, tobacco for coffee or accoutrements, hard tack or sugar for corn cake. New acquaintances were made. In some instances old acquaintances were revived. A Connecticut sergeant found a townsman and school mate in a sergeant over the way. A Connecticut officer found a townsman in a rebel officer. A Maryland regiment was vis-a-vis with a Maryland secession regiment. Many made a union were there. One found a brother on the other side and yet another his own father! After a little time the swapping of the day was done and officers and men returned to their respective lines. All was quiet again until the artillery re-opened fire. Then half a score of loiterers sprang up from their concealment in the corn scrape, and to their places within the works. Thus the fighting and the trading alternated.

THE ROAD TO SAN JUAN.

Light continues to be shed on the San Juan Road question, and there is reason to hope that the public will soon have information enough before them to enable them to form a judgment.

The Proposition, Howe, of the Golden Globe says: Mankind is still in great anxiety awaiting an enlightenment regarding the shortest and most feasible route to the San Juan mines. This is a matter that has received a great deal of attention in the newspapers. But people are unable to choose between the routes, since they out-number the denominations, or religious roads to the skies, heretofore, as indicated by the orthodox fingers-boards. Whenever any apparently interested person, desirous simply of pointing the way to others, has used the newspapers to indicate what, in his judgment, was the best and shortest route, some other fellow has, with one fell stroke of the pen, invariably pointed that route, and substituted his own favorite road in its stead. So, as the matter is now presented, there are about 27 roads, more or less, that are decidedly the best to be followed, and yet people are not quite certain that a man and team would not perish on any one of them.

The Mosca Pass Road has been spoken of very favorably by those who are anxious to make Pueblo the outfitting point, but a correspondent of the Pueblo Chieftain concerning it, says: The Mosca Pass road is not suitable to drive a herd of sheep over, for they would die of fatigue traveling through the heavy sand, much less a heavily laden wagon dragging through sand up to the axles. Mr. Editor, will you please in review Messrs. Gaylorn and McGinnis; these gentlemen have just crossed over that pass and left this place to-day, and will be in Pueblo in a few days. They had a light buggy, but found it difficult to wade through the sand with that even. The Arkansas route is the only travelled road now, and will be found the best route at all seasons. The Gazette man must have referred to the Mosca Pass route via Pueblo, when he said it was a shorter route to Del Norte, but sandy. There is not more than ten miles of sand, that, and that is not bad, to encounter from Pueblo to Del Norte via Fort Garland. I could say more on this subject, but will refrain.

A correspondent, writing from Saguache, to the Fairplay Swan-I says: There has been a toll road company organized here with a capital stock of twenty thousand dollars, for the purpose of constructing a wagon road, from this place, via Cochetopa pass, to the San Juan mines. When the above described road is opened to travel, which will be at the first of July next, the distance from Denver via Fairplay and Saguache, to the San Juan mines, will be about one hundred miles shorter than by any other route, and by far better, from the fact that the mountain passes are lower, with easier grades, less snow in winter, an abundance of wood and pure water, the plenty of grass for stock along the entire route. When the above facts become known to the public there will be no more toiling across the rocky mountains, which consists to receive the benefit of the travel to the San Juan mines. This road, we may say by way of argument, will be of as much service to those who make Colorado Springs their starting point as of those who set out from Denver.

The Denver Times gives the views of a gentleman recently arrived in that city from Del Norte, who says that the snow is twice as deep in the Sangre de Cristo Pass as in the Puerta Pass or the Abeyta Pass, and that it is impossible to get through the former without at least six horses. Many have attempted it, and the bare bones of their mules, picked clean by the coyotes and wolves, furnish abundant evidence of their indiscretion.

Similarly the San Juan Prospector gives the experience of a gentleman who has just arrived in Del Norte from the Animas City, and who reports the snow on some parts of the Tierra Amarilla route to be found to five feet deep. He further says that, a short time before leaving Animas, he attempted to get into the mine from that point, but found it impossible on account of the very great depth of snow. The miners on the mines can be reached much earlier from Del Norte than from Animas. He says that the rivers on the Tierra Amarilla route will undoubtedly be very high when the snow begins to melt, and that the cracks and other appearances on their banks show them to be very turbulent and violent streams when swollen.

Now, ladies and gentlemen, "You pays your money, and you takes your choice."

TAX.

A correspondent, writing to us from South Park, asks whether we cannot prevail upon some moneyed gentleman to give out seed for four thousand bushels of Flax Seed to farmers, who would agree to sow it and return the crop in the fall. An old miner, he says, would not cost much, and such an enterprize would undoubtedly be successful. The fact that Flax grows naturally, even in the mountains, shows that it could be cultivated to advantage, and the demand for oil and other products from the plant scarcely needs to be set forth.

There is a chance for our new-established Board of Manufactures. We may say further that, if an oil mill were established, some profitable use might be made of the tons of Sun Flower Seeds which now scattered over the country in the fall, to the plague of the farmers. Sunflower oil is, we believe, one of the finest lubricating oils known, and but little inferior to olive oil.

FROM OUR CONTEMPORARIES.

SOME INEQUALITIES.

(From the Golden Globe.)

We hear a lawyer get a handsome fee recently in court that it was worth $200 to present an argument in a case in the office of the Secretary of the Interior, at Washington, which reminds us of the inequality of labor. A college professor, who has studied a lifetime for his knowledge, goes out an experience on $1,200 to $2,000 per year. A tradesman works hard, runs heavy risks, and invests capital in many instances for the same amount of profit, and in a hundred positions the world over are subject to the same rule. You go in and talk five minutes with a lawyer or a doctor, you pay five or ten dollars for it. If you employ him for a day you pay down $20 in advance. A "retainer" is one of the things common to lawyers. If you want to keep an attorney in the vicinity of your case out of mischief you give him a hundred dollars or so for his "influence." It is estimated that there are about two cases per year for all the lawyers in the United States, and as they live their charges must be exorbitant. Because Congress voted itself an increase of pay the whole nation has been convulsed, but people go on year in and year out paying with a good grace these professional men fees that make them comfortable bond holders compared with a Congressman. A notary charges you $2 to put his seal to a document, yet if a railroad company charges eight cents per mile for transportation, we have the Grange organization to stop the robbery. A man grumbles at $2 or $3 per year for a newspaper that costs thousands of dollars, yet he willingly pay a dentist $2 for pulling a tooth. Sugar and coffee with three per cent. profit is considered outrageous, yet men pay three per cent. per month on money and consider it a favor. A Granger pays fifty cents for weighing a load of hay with good grace, but a dealer offers a few cents per ton below the market price for the same and cries out against hard times. The county pays an attorney about a dollar a minute for his work, and a juryman or witness gets $2 50 per day in county warrants worth 65 cents on the dollar. We don't know as this state of things affects us, but just thought we'd mention it.

SCOURING WOOL.

(From the Colorado Agriculturist.)

We are much in need of some more profitable manner of disposing of our wool than is at present. As it now is, for every hundred pounds of fleece wool, we send to market forty pounds of dirt. We not only pay freight on this dirt, but we pay commission men for selling it. It is estimated that States' wool, scoured fifty per cent. in scouring, but Colorado wool only forty or forty-five per cent., on account of the quantity of grease in it.

Fleece wool is subject to disadvantages, because one manufacturer cannot use all the different qualities in a single fleece, so that in order to get what he wants he must buy much that he does not want, and thus the chances of disposing of the latter to some one who does want it. When it always is the fleece, he must not only guess at how much wool each fleece contains that he does not want, but also how much dirt it contains, and every good buyer, after guessing as closely as possible, will add an margin enough to make it safe.

It would be too expensive for each wool grower to scour his own wool, even if he knew how to do it, which is as necessary as the scouring. But an establishment such as could easily sort the wools of the neighborhood would be useless be profitable, both to the producers and the manufacturers. Such an establishment would receive fleece wool in sacks, sort the different qualities from each fleece, then scour and re-sack each quality by itself. Such wool would be sold by sample, as the buyer would know what he was getting in wool and just what he could give for it. The only question with him would be, which quality he should buy to suit his wants. Middle men might be dispensed with, and the wool sold directly to the manufacturer.

Take an example:

Most fleece wools would not shrink so much as the above estimate, in scouring, and would sell for at least double the price of unwashed wool, probably more as the examination of any wool market report will show.

Let the wool growers discuss their support for the session, in order to test it, and conference parties can be found to undertake this wool-scouring business.

LANDED ESTATES IN COLORADO.

(From the Denver Times.)

Certain journals are seeking to create the impression abroad that nearly all the lands in Colorado have fallen into private ownership. It is true that a few persons hold immense tracts of land. The St. Vrain grant alone, comprising about 100,000 acres, is in the possession of less than twenty owners. But the magnificent Colorado is not a wilderness even by our own citizens. The Territory contains somewhere about 68,000,000 acres of land. Probably 2,000,000 acres are claimed by railroads, but there are still over 50,000,000 acres open for some sort of occupancy, of which a large portion is mineral bearing, while a large part is available for culture or pasturage. There is no lack of facilities for getting government land in Colorado, and there are still large tracts well adapted for colonizing purposes. There is no better section in the West for colonists than Colorado, and none which offers in the various considerations of climate, soil and productiveness—greater inducements to settlers.

DISTRICT COURT.

District Court will open in Wauneta, on Tuesday next. The Docket contains about fifty cases, nearly equally divided between civil and criminal. Some of the cases are very important ones, and are likely to excite considerable interest.

On a change of venue from Pueblo County, the case of the People vs. James H. Maddox, for murder, will be tried. District Attorney Henry and Mr. Benjamin Maddox will prosecute, and Messrs. Richmond and Gurney will defend.

A case involving the title to valuable mining property—Miss Streeter and others vs. E. McMullen and others—will also come before the Court upon a change of venue from Clear Creek County. The Hon. E. M. Teller is engaged in this case.

The new Trial of the Colorado Springs Company v. Cowen & McDowell will come up; also the poisoning case against Dr. Davis.

A dispatch from Washington states that the House Committee on Territories have agreed to report a bill for the admission of New Mexico into the Union as a State.

OUR NEIGHBOR'S CHILDREN.

A farmer was walking with a friend through a beautiful meadow, when he chanced to observe a thistle growing thriftily on the opposite side of the fence. Immediately he sprang over and cut it off close to the ground.

"Is that your fence?" asked the other.

"Oh! no; but the weeds don't care much for fences. If I should leave that thistle to blossom in my neighbor's field, I should soon have plenty in my own."

This answer may serve as a hint to fathers and mothers. It is of importance to them how their neighbor's children turn out. Heartweed is careless fastnesses for boundary fences. Boys and girls who go to the same school, or who live in the same neighborhood, catch many a trait from each other. It is for our duty as well as our interest to look to what we do for the benefit of our neighbor's children.

ORIGIN OF PLANTS.

Velvet came from the East. Cabbage grew wild in Siberia. Rye, which came from Siberia, originated in Germany. The chestnut came from Italy. The potato is a native of Peru. Tea originated in Japan. Tobacco is a native of Virginia. Millet was first known in India. The bee is a native of Europe. The cotton of commerce is a native of America. Oats originated in North Africa. The dog originated in the East. Rye came originally from Siberia. Barley was first known in Sarmatia. The marshmallow is a native of Arabia. The pear and apple are from Europe. Strawberries were brought from Peru. Spinach was first cultivated in Arabia. The mulberry tree originated in Persia. The horse chestnut is a native of Asia. The pitcher came from the Island of Crete. The cucumber came from the Island of Ceylon. The fig grows in Syria. The lemon is native to Persia. The orange is native to China. The pomegranate grows in Barbary. The quince is native to the South of Europe. The cinnamon is native to Ceylon. The East Indies or Coromandel coast gave us the tamarind. The Mediterranean is the parent of the cloves and the pink. Money was first coined in the mountain of Parnassus.

SEASONABLE.

The store windows always contain the latest of newspaper displays in the most enchanting patterns and colors, with a glaring show of chromos. They are lovely to look at, but, if some enterprising storekeeper would furnish a sort of glue with which they could be put together, she would invest in a suite of rooms that would be the present and the mention of neighbors. Street lessons in everything to make a home happy should begin with young girls as well as many young men. Street iron line is cold, and the tearful dressing of gum tragacanth or gum arabic makes the fabric as brittle as glass.

The uniform of men will come in with the early days of summer, but the style for knickerbockers always found to be the English jacket and soft dark colors will be the favorites, though nothing is said of grays and pearl tints of mouse. Next every woman leaving off dark winter wear will be pressed with the necessity of getting a gray suit, as of the light shades of French gray, a flying table of the national gray, the mouse, the pearl, the chinchilla, and the dove. Spring bonnets will be crowded up in Yard's and so long the thing for April, crowded with plenty of ribbons, chose heavily a great number of gays parade the street on April fools day of the present year. Nothing ribbon is very fashionable, and well it might be. The new rules taken effect on Saturday, June 1, 1874. Next to the fresh color the soft and velvety colors seem to have rotated to the season of the good girls, and Dana lambs wears something that takes still better than a simple, teething straw hat, adorned with modest cent ribbon streamers. Wide brims to hats are inevitable this summer. They were very much worn in Paris last summer, and we are usually one season behind. For women past the flush of youth wide brims are recommended. The pretty one, turban, and a dozen other brimless styles, choose so merrily for crows' feet and mass up of the wearer. Dainty sized shoes under which to creep is as grateful to a woman as a shoe is to a calf.

The young ladies here are all at work embroidering little hanging pockets, made of acres and beaded. They are very ornamental, resembling from as strings. They are more secure fastened with the old-fashioned gold cuff button than with buttons. Most every lady has an old jewel case that we furnish a card of those obsolete articles.

A lady's wardrobe is rarely received here from abroad. Some of these tiny fancy pockets upon every dress, and the hats were made upon big crowned, wide brimmed frames covered with black net. They jetted with patterns. Around the crown was a scarf of net, (thread net with figures upon it, and the brims were embroidered with jet, and the thread edge surrounding the entire scarf jetted also. A large bouquet of flowers at one side where the brim was turned up. The hats were precisely the same for three suits, varying only in the garniture of flowers and the color of the large Alsatian bow, which fastened the scarf face behind.

The suits were variously trimmed with chagrin and some received nine parts in front of the skirts and plain flounces behind, accompanied by the inevitable sash in place, colored bordered silk handkerchiefs out of outside pockets, stalking jackets and ties. We are going to color our city like men this year.—Mill B., St. Louis Republican.

The Christian people of Scotland, Ireland, and New England have been more moral than the same classes among other nations. Those who have received fail, in other words, a pure morality, have always produced more good and virtues than those who preached good works, or the mere regulator of outward acts.—Sir James Mackintosh.

An Jones, deacon in a Connecticut parish—his name was not Richard Smith—was sorely troubled about the Copernican system of the universe. He believed it to be unscriptural, and untrue, and he called on his minister. The latter being a man of his own eyes a scientific man, and also a believer in Copernicus, said the sun was a stationary body not revolving, as the deacon maintained, around the earth. But the latter pointed with an air of triumph to the story of Joshua, when he commanded the sun to stand still. "Very well," said the minister, "show me, if you can, the passage of Scripture where it was Joshua ever commanded the sun to move again."

INFORMATION FOR STRANGERS.

COLORADO.

To borrow the expression of a well-known writer, the Territory of Colorado straddles the Rocky Mountains like a saddle—a part of it being on their eastern flank, a part on their western flank, and a part of it being taken up by the mountains themselves. It lies between the 37th and 41st parallels of north latitude, and the 102nd and 109th meridians of west longitude, being bounded on the north by Wyoming and Nebraska, and on the east by Nebraska and Kansas, and on the south by New Mexico, and on the west by Utah. The area embraced forms nearly a square, containing about 100,475 square miles, or 67,420,000 acres—a greater extent of country than all of Great Britain, with a colony or two included, and quite as large as New York, Pennsylvania, and Massachusetts, with New Jersey thrown in for good measure."

For many reasons, Colorado is one of the most remarkable sections of country on the face of the earth.

Though not geographically, it is, really, the centre of the North American Continent. Up to its giant peaks, there is a gradual slope on every side, from the Atlantic on the east, the Pacific on the west, the Gulf of Mexico on the south, and the confines of the Polar Sea on the north.

The dwellers on its "plains" or lower lands, live, on the average, about a mile above the level of the sea, whilst those who live in its "mountain towns," are lifted still nearer heaven.

Its scenery is magnificently grand. Its climate is delightfully cheering and invigorating. The clear air and the bright sunshine, which continually shard terrent, act like a charm upon the system, invigorating the bodily powers and inducing constant "good spirits." The dryness and purity of the atmosphere renders it especially suitable for such as are of consumptive or asthmatic tendencies, or suffer from any affection of the throat or lungs, such—unless the disease has obtained too firm a grip—are almost certain to regain health and strength.

The resources of this country are almost limitless and innumerable.

Its mountains are stained and streaked with precious metals of all kinds—gold and silver, copper and lead, coal and iron.

Cradled in their brawny arms and lying at their outspread feet, are peaceful valleys, wherein the farmer raises crops of all kinds. Owing to the small rainfall, irrigation is necessary to the cultivation of the soil, but this, when understood, is comparatively little labor, and far more than compensated for by the great yield which is obtained.

Eastward from the mountains, the "great plains" stretch in almost boundless extent, covered with rich grasses, which render them the best pastures in the world. Sheep and cattle range upon them with but little care, and with a few exceptions, through the winter as well as the summer. During the fall, the dryness of the atmosphere cures the grasses, sealing up within them all their nutritious qualities and leaving them standing upon the ground as natural hay—a winter stock of feed, needing no preparation and no housing.

The Foothills are covered with timber, and contain almost every variety of rock and ore. Some of the rivers afford water-power of the finest character.

In short, Colorado offers all the natural resources necessary for carrying on the three great productive industries—Mining, Agriculture, and Manufactures—and all the attractions of Scenery and Climate calculated to make it a healthful and delightful home.

EL PASO COUNTY.

El Paso County is one of the central counties of the Territory, and embraces features of its principal physical characteristics—mountain, valley, and plain. Along its northern border stretches the Great Colorado "Divide," a pine covered mountain spur, which takes its name from the fact that it separates the sections of country tributary to the chief rivers of the Territory, the Platte in the north and the Arkansas in the south. From the "Divide" the county has a continual slope southward, its southern boundary being eighteen miles south of the Arkansas, the distance from north to south being about forty two miles. These characteristics are known to the whole of the country. The golden wall, to the rising sun, has a cracked rifle exposure, more than a terrestrial. The distance from the east to west, along the drives to the foot of the mountains, is twelve miles, and beyond that, the country rises gradually, at first in undulations, then into ridges, and finally into the mountains, which do not seem very high. The area may be divided into three parts, of which a thousand square miles has been surveyed.

The Pike's Peak range is the central point of the gold and silver region, and is rich in precious metals. Colorado City, Manitou, Cheyenne, El Paso, Gold Hill, Mount Rosa, Mineral Point, and other towns, are located in mining districts of the Territory. El Paso is now the most large and populous town in the Territory, the southwest, where the mountains are rapidly growing into greater importance, being among the best in the Territory, will cause a large demand for agricultural and dairy products.

There are agricultural lands which can be watered by ditches, taken out of the streams, and which, when so watered, will yield from $50 to $100 per acre. Experiments, however, will shortly determine the extent of water, and, if they prove favorable, the lands of acres of the most tempting land will be open for entry. Settlers throughout the country are now scattered in "parks," on which grains and vegetables of the first quality can be raised to even great advantage from the best of valleys.

In the mountains, most of the land, available for stock ranges, has been taken up, and settlers are coming from all parts. There are no Indians within the limits of the county, which is now in the plains, which are in the south, and the Ute Pass, which water could be brought by means of irrigation.

Necessity has not yet forced the people to cultivate land, but it is only a matter of time, when, by the growing population, the land will be cultivated, and the country will be made to yield its treasures.

The progress of the Stock Interest of the county may be gathered from the following figures taken from the Assessor's report for 1873. In that year there were [illegible] horses, [illegible] mules, [illegible] cattle, [illegible] sheep, [illegible] hogs, [illegible] goats, [illegible] asses, [illegible] stands of bees, [illegible] pounds of wool, [illegible] pounds of honey, and [illegible] pounds of beeswax. Last year the wool crop of the county amounted to 171,812 pounds.

The Lumber Interest is an important part of the business of the county, there being five steam saw mills, one stationary, and one portable, in El Paso County, and many other counties in the Territory.

Here is the home of Pike's Peak, the most celebrated of the Rocky Mountains, rising to a height of upwards of [illegible] feet, and has long covered its snows all the year. Regarded at first that Peak is a long range of [illegible] Hills, fifty miles away, they would be mistaken in any other idea, "infinite beyond with variety, from any country, with rocky ridges and rounded boulders and sloping slopes, with a constant play of light and shade, with long stretches of rich hues, interspersed with streaks of green and dark grooves of pine—the whole forming a panorama of exceeding beauty, of which the eye never tires.

Those who visit Manitou see the wonderful and famous "Garden of the Gods," in which large rocks, hundreds of feet high, and of the most fantastic shapes, and gorgeous colors, form a scene which excites the wonder of all who behold it. Close to the Garden is "Glen Eyrie," which is Queen's Cabin, equally wonderful and beautiful. Five miles to the southwest of the town is "Cheyenne Canon," a magnificent gorge, whose stupendous walls of rock and beautiful waterfalls give it an almost unrivaled grandeur. Two miles north is "Monument Park," studded with groups of lofty columns of sandstone, which look like obelisks of some by gone race of giants. Immediately beyond Manitou, are the Rainbow Glen, the Canon and Falls of the Fountain, and the Ute Pass. Indeed, in all directions, are scenes of grandeur and of beauty. "The advantage of this point," says a recent writer, "is that it gets you at once into the heart of the mountains."

The Springs and the Scenery combined are destined, of themselves, to build up a town of considerable size and importance. Here will be a place of resort—of almost unequaled attractions—known the world over. Last year brought thousands of visitors, from almost every State in the Union, and from foreign lands, and each succeeding season will bring an increasing throng, whilst many, who are in search of health, have already chosen it as their permanent home, and many more will settle here in order to secure the same inestimable boon.

Everything possible is being done to heighten the attractive character of a spot on which Nature has bestowed so many advantages. It is intended to make Colorado Springs not only famous as a Sanitarium, but also as an educational centre, and a home of refined society. Large reservations have been made for schools and kindred institutions, and the Town, although still in its infancy, has undertaken the erection of a costly school-house. Wide streets and avenues and spacious squares have been laid out, and thousands of trees have been planted.

COLORADO SPRINGS.

The town of Colorado Springs is situated in the centre of El Paso county, at a point where the Monument Creek unites with the Fontaine qui Bouille and where the Ute Pass opens upon the plains.

It is a principal station on the Denver and Rio Grande Railway, seventy-six miles south of Denver, the metropolis of the Territory, and forty-two miles north of Pueblo.

The town takes its name from numerous valuable mineral springs in the immediate neighborhood. The most important of these are grouped together about five miles to the west, in a beautiful glen, to which has been given the name of Manitou. These are the celebrated "Boiling Springs," which, years ago, were made known to the world by Fremont, Ruxton, and other writers. Formerly they were visited on account of their medicinal virtues by the native tribes of Indians, who regarded them as supernatural phenomena caused by the direct action of the Great Spirit. In latter times, notwithstanding the difficulty of access to them, their fame has attracted large numbers of invalids, anxious to avail themselves of the healing waters. During the last two years, a large amount has been expended in laying out and adorning the grounds in the neighborhood; handsome, commodious, and comfortable hotels have been built, bath-houses have been fitted up, and many other conveniences provided. Now that these famous springs are so easily accessible, and that every provision has been made for the comfort of visitors, there can be no doubt but a few years will suffice to make them as attractive a point as is Saratoga in the East. Thousands will throng to them every year, and many will take up permanent abodes around them. The springs are seven in number, and are useful both for drinking and bathing purposes, being highly beneficial in rheumatism, skin diseases, general debility, and numerous other ailments which we need not catalogue.

In addition to these wonderful springs, some of the most remarkable and magnificent scenery on the American Continent is in proximity to the town.

Ample funds will accumulate to carry on the work of beautifying the town, of erecting public buildings, and of constructing necessary public works. The town is a Colony "own, and the whole of the profits derived from the sale of the Colony lots and lands, are appropriated to public improvements. The land having been bought in large parcels at low rates, and being sold to colonists in small lots at advanced figures, many thousands of dollars will thus be devoted to the purposes named.

Persons may become colonists by purchasing certificates of membership, which are of four grades, according to the privileges conveyed: $50, $75, $150, $200. A certificate entitles a member to locate certain lots and lands. These are of three denominations: "Business Lots," 25 feet by 190 feet, ranging in prices from $100 to $250; "Residence Lots," 50 feet by 190 feet, and 100 feet by 190 feet, ranging in prices from $50 to $150; "Outlying Tracts," of the following sizes and prices: One-acre tracts, $150; five-acre tracts, $50; ten-acre tracts, $30 to $50 an acre; twenty-acre tracts, $20 to $40 an acre; forty-acre tracts, $15 to $20. A $50 certificate entitles its holder to locate a $50 residence lot; a $75 certificate, any residence lot irrespective of price; a $150 certificate, to locate a business and residence lot or a business lot and outlying tract, or a residence lot and outlying tract, provided the total value of the lands so and does not exceed $300; a $200 certificate, to locate similar lots as the previous, but irrespective of price. The amount paid for the certificate is credited for the lots located, and the balance of the value of the lots exceeds that of the certificate, can be paid any time within twelve months of the location or of the first location, if more than one is made upon the same certificate. Members may take out as many certificates as they please, but are bound to make one improvement that is to put up a house, or make some equivalent expenditure for each certificate, within four months of making the first location upon it. Upon this being done, and payment of the lots completed, deeds are given conveying full title, with one condition, however—that no intoxicating liquors shall ever be sold on such lots in any premises having the character of a place of public resort; breach of this condition involves forfeiture of the property.

The lands about the Town, of which the Colony possesses about 10,000 acres, are exceedingly adapted for cultivation. A great portion is almost as flat as a table, with an exceedingly slight slope, so that can be irrigated with the utmost facility. Irrigating canals have been constructed, and large reservoirs for the purpose of storing water as an insurance against exceptionally dry seasons. The locality and the soil are especially suitable for the cultivation of small fruits, and for these a ready market will be found. In addition to the supply required by the Town, and by the mines not far away, a company has been formed for the purpose of establishing a Canning Factory in the Town so soon as the quantity of fruit grown shall exceed the home consumption.

The progress already made by the Town, has been astonishingly rapid. Up to date—that is, little more than two years from the commencement of the enterprise—there have been 950 certificates of membership taken out, on most of which two locations have been made. The population, according to the nearest estimate we can form, is between twenty and twenty-five hundred. The various institutions necessary to a well ordered community, have been quickly got into working order. There are two churches built, two in course of erection, and two of those others contemplated, a graded public school with four teachers, and a school of three hundred scholars; two newspapers and printing offices, post office, telegraph office, U. S. Signal office, two banks, several large hotels, stores of all kinds, well stocked—where the luxuries as well as the necessaries of life can be obtained—livery stables, etc. The Town has been organized with trustees and other officers, and several companies have been formed for the prosecution of important commercial undertakings—including a steam saw-mill in active operation, brick-manufacture, fruit canning, etc. In short, the basis has been well laid for growing progress and prosperity.

To such, therefore, as are seeking new homes, Colorado Springs offer advantages of the highest order.
